

Wisconsin Department of Justice

- Office of Crime Victim Services (OCVS)

Hannah Wrobel is a Victim Rights Specialist in the Victim Resource Center of the Office of Crime Victim Services at the Wisconsin Department of Justice. Hannah works with crime victims to address concerns and complaints alleging victims' rights violations by public agencies and officials. She provides information, advocacy, and assistance by working with the parties involved to reach a resolution. She also provides victim/witness services in cases prosecuted by DOJ and manages the Victim Appellate Notification Services program where she notifies victims of the outcome of criminal appeals. Additionally, Hannah provides training and technical assistance to allied professionals throughout the state about crime victims' rights and services. Prior to joining OCVS in 2017, she was a Victim/Witness Specialist with the Waukesha County District Attorney's Office. Hannah is a double Badger, having attended UW-Madison for both undergrad and law school.